MESSAGE FROM PRINCIPAL & HEAD OF SCHOOL

Dear Alumni, School Families and Friends of Roanoke Catholic,

Each year at graduation, we recognize four seniors whose academic excellence and outstanding character deserve special merit, proclaiming them members of the "Celtic Cross" as they go forth to represent the future of our community and culture.

But as we proclaim our future, it is just as important to reflect on our past and take a minute to recognize and give thanks to the folks who have demonstrated their love and devotion to our school community. Over the last year, Roanoke Catholic lost four incredible people who lived their lives in service to our church, their families and friends and our beloved school.

Indeed, they formed their own Celtic Cross.

Christian Hoeser, Class of '44, passed away August 14, 2017. A lifelong Celtic, he volunteered as Roanoke Catholic's first football coach in the 1960s. Until the morning of his death, Mr. Hoeser faithfully attended Mass every day, and generously gave of his time and treasure to our school and many other Catholic causes. This summer we learned that he left Roanoke Catholic an incredibly generous bequest that will inspire our institution for years to come.

In November, we lost Peggy Ann Russell Saul, Class of '52, who witnessed the birth of Roanoke Catholic as a student when St. Andrew's and Our Lady of Nazareth schools merged. Her senior year she helped lead the Celtics to its first state championship as a member of the girls basketball team. She too is leaving a legacy gift to Roanoke Catholic.

As a transplant to Roanoke to work for Roanoke Steel, Eugene Francis Brady, Sr., didn't attend Roanoke Catholic, but his five children and many of his grandchildren did. Each year he generously supported our school, as recently as a month before his death on April 11 at the age of 95.

Most recently, on June 15 our oldest living alumna, Dorothy "Dot" Meador, Class of '35, passed away at the age of 99. She too faithfully gave to Roanoke Catholic — gifts that included her daughter, Karen Mabry, Class of '67, who also served as principal from 1987 to 2002.

These four individuals are some of the most treasured friends of Roanoke Catholic. Their time on campus, in a variety of roles, provided great history lessons for our staff and students. As I recall conversations with Chris, Gene and Dot in recent years, there were so many fond memories they were able to share with me. Watching videos with Chris and Gene from their reenactments on some commercials we ran in 2005-2006 brought smiles to their faces and mine. Talking with Dot at our 125th anniversary and seeing her beam with pride as we recognized her love and commitment to Roanoke Catholic was a wonderful memory for all of us in attendance. Peggy's love of Roanoke Catholic is unmatched and her desire — along with Dot's, Chris' and Gene's — was to ensure our future remains as promising as it has for the last 129 years.

Blessings to all of you,

Patrick W. Patterson

Roanoke Catholic teacher gives lifesaving gift to stranger

ROANOKE, Va. (WDBJ7) - One hometown teacher gives a lot to his fifth grade classroom every day. But this summer, Timothy Carlin decided to give a big, lifesaving gift to a complete stranger.

Carlin is a practical man. So when he was asked to consider a practical solution to an impractical problem, there was no question in his mind of what to do next.

"Just seemed the right thing to do," he said.

Carlin's wife's colleague's wife needed a kidney.

"She started putting out calls for, 'Hey anybody wanna sign up to donate?'" he said. "So both my wife and I put our name on the list for that."

Carlin, it turned out, was a good match.

"I had blood taken," Carlin explained, "and urine taken and did 24-hour urine studies."

Someone else ended up giving their friend a kidney, but Carlin had already made up his mind.

"Well I made a joke that this kidney's dead to me anyway now so just take it out — go!"

On July 3 Carlin went to the University of Virginia hospital and donated a kidney.

The recipient? He has no idea.

"It was something that seemed right and it was something I could do," Carlin explained. "So given those two things there's no reason I shouldn't do it."

And for this Catholic school teacher this donation is where medical intervention meets divine intervention.

"Biblically ... If we have two coats and we're called to give one of them, how much more important is a kidney?"

Carlin is recovering well.

"These are the lap sites," he said, pointing to incision scars on his abdomen.

Carlin's doctors told him he was UVA's only non-directed donor of the year.

But for a man of faith and of practicality, this donation is just another one of life's lessons.

"I'm just an unworthy servant, I did just what was expected of me," he said. "I didn't do anything special. I did something that was expected of me."

RCS school color gets greener with recycling program

Did you know aluminum cans take 50 years to decompose ... diapers 500 years ... plastic grocery sacks 1,000?

Striving to fight pollution and protect our earth, Roanoke Catholic launched a new recycling program this spring with the introduction of a mixed-stream recycling dumpster, along with large bins for our cafeteria, teachers' lounges and library, and individual totes for every classroom and office. This initiative is in addition to the recent installation of new energy-efficient doors, windows and Exterior Insulation and Finish Systems building materials, and LED lighting throughout our campus.

Many thanks to our parents, teachers and students for helping us fulfill Pope Francis' 2013 encyclical Laudato si ("Praise be to you.") that calls for Catholics to "care for our common home."

"I am so excited that we're being good stewards of the earth and carrying out what Pope Francis asks us to do," said Helen Price, middle school math and theology teacher.

RCS 7th grader competes at National Spelling Bee

In May, RCS' Elizabeth Safford survived almost to the end of the third round of the 2018 Scripps National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C., before her amazing run came to an end. As the first RCS student to appear in the National Spelling Bee, she will have one more chance in her 8th grade year to repeat her success and represent the Celtics again.

RCS says Nǐ hǎo (hello) to three Chinese “sister schools”

Roanoke Catholic's summer camp program went international in 2018. Over the course of three weeks, 160 Chinese middle school students and teachers took part in week-long camps coordinated by RCS that featured morning academic classes and afternoon field trips to regional attractions such as the Science Museum of Western Virginia, Roanoke College, Virginia Safari Park, and a hike to the Mill Mountain Star.

Principal Patrick Patterson signed “sister school” agreements with principals from schools in Nanjing and Shi Jiazhuang, whose principal in turn presented Mr. Patterson with student art including a scroll that translates “Friendship Forever.”

RCS students create 3-D print of Bishop Knestout coat of arms

A MEDIEVAL SYMBOL OF RANK RECEIVED A TECHNOLOGICAL treatment in April by two Roanoke Catholic students who created a 3-D print of His Excellency Bishop Barry Knestout's coat of arms.

Seniors Elizabeth Schaible (pictured right) and Niki Patel, working in Donna Nickels' Engineering/3-D Printing class, were inspired to take on the challenge after Bishop Knestout's visit in January to Roanoke Catholic.

Principal and Head of School Patrick Patterson "came in and said that the Bishop was very interested in our 3-D printing program and ... he asked us if we could make him something," says Elizabeth. "We decided to make a 3-D print of his crest. We took about two months of trial and error, but we finally did it."

The students first had to design the symbol on a 3-D computer graphics software program called Blender --- no small task given the intricacies of the coat of arms that includes the Diocese of Richmond shield of three stars

(symbolizing the Trinity) on a red, white and blue background; a white tower (recalling Bishop Knestout's undergraduate studies in architecture); a gold lion; red crosses; green tassels; and the motto "Christ Our Hope."

According to a story in The Catholic Virginian about the coat of arms: "In designing the shield -- the central element in what is formally called the heraldic achievement - a bishop has an opportunity to depict symbolically various aspects of his own life and heritage, and to highlight particular aspects of Catholic faith and devotion that are important to him."

"Elizabeth and Niki worked really hard," says Ms. Nickels. "I gave them no directions. They took the initiative themselves, they did the entire project and they have some beautiful results."

Both Elizabeth and Niki plan to further their 3D education in the fall when they enroll at the University of Virginia. "I will be attending UVA next year where I will be pursuing a pre-medical track," says Niki. "I hope that in my future career in medicine I would be able to pursue 3D printing because in the medical field 3D printing is very useful in prosthetics and organ replacement."

Scholarships – Honors Day 2018

Mary Gillespie Hardie Scholarships

6th grader Sean Douglass, pictured right, received the 2018 lower school Mary Gillespie Hardie Scholarship — which provides full tuition, books, uniforms and sports fees — from members of Hardie and Gillespie family. The upper school award went to 11th grader Amelia Pyle.

The award is presented to a student who best exemplifies the qualities of Mary Gillespie Hardie: intelligence and passion for learning, dignity and humility, great warmth and charity of spirit, and love of God. A graduate of Our Lady of Nazareth and a St. Andrews and Roanoke Catholic High parent, she believed that every child deserved a first-rate education. Mary instilled in her own children a love of learning and the satisfaction that comes from doing one's best.

Dr. Robert L.A. Keeley Scholarships

The 2018 recipients of the $1,000 Dr. Robert L. A. Keeley Scholarships were senior Meagan Gillette (pictured left) for upper school, 5th grader Lorenzo Dean for lower school, and Martha Drapac, '18, who will attend Virginia Tech in the fall.

A 1938 graduate of Roanoke Catholic School, Dr. Keeley was a man who always gave back and paid it forward. He lived a life of commitment to helping others through his dedication and compassion; he demonstrated his gratitude for God's gifts and believed in the dignity of all people.

An avid supporter of the arts and firm believer in Catholic education, Dr. Keeley maintained that the strength of a community's future is built upon the legacy of previous generations. Dr. Keeley and his wife of 65 years, Nina, instilled in their 15 children a love of learning and the satisfaction that comes from doing one's best. All Keeley children graduated RCS.

Hallmarks include a strong work ethic and scholastic performance to the best of the student's indicated ability. The students should recognize the value of an engaged citizen whose membership in the school community enriches it. These students are selfless, unassuming people, worthy of the admiration and respect of his or her peers. Pictured here presenting the scholarships: Dr. Keeley's daughter, Dr. Nina Sweeney, '88.

ANCIENT ORDER OF HIBERNIANS Father Lynch Division in Roanoke focuses its charitable efforts on RCS students. AOH is an Irish Catholic fraternal organization originally founded to help immigrants in the U.S. Established in Roanoke in 1901, the Father Lynch Division donated the large stain glass window of St. Patrick in St. Andrew's Catholic Church.

10th grader Fianna Miller, right, and 2nd grader Silas Emma-Marshall received the 2018 AOH upper school and lower school scholarships. Martha Drapac (Virginia Tech), pictured left with AOH's Jim Sullivan, received the AOH President's Award, which is given to a graduating senior who embodies the RCS community spirit.

Upper school award went to 10th grader Christopher Moak.

Presenting the $500 award was Zach's father, Rick Bowyer.

Preference is given to a wrestler, cross-country runner or student athlete. 2018 recipient: Thomas Becker, who received the $500 scholarship from Zachary's father, Dave Burns, and his sister, Ali, '12.

10th grader Isabella Myers received the 2018 $1,000 RAYFUS PARHAM HONORARY SCHOLARSHIP. For 21 years, Mr. Parham dedicated himself to the students at RCS as music teacher and band director. Created in his honor upon his retirement in June 2017, this annual scholarship is awarded to a student who exemplifies the qualities and values so evident in the work that Mr. Parham shared with RCS for many years: love of music, persistence, dedication, and humor.
